However, I am not sure what I need to do to configure my app to accept URLs with this custom scheme. Basically, this is what I have now: In AppDelegate, I have func application(_ application: UIApplication, open url: URL, options: [UIApplicationOpenURLOptionsKey : Any]) -> Bool { return true } And, in the AppDelegate.swift file, I have func application(application: UIApplication, open url: URL, sourceApplication: String?, annotation: Any) -> Bool { return true } But these do not seem to be the methods that are called when the custom URL scheme is clicked, as I am having trouble in debugging this process. A: Here's how your application.openURL should look like func application(_ application: UIApplication, open url: URL, sourceApplication: String?, annotation: Any) -> Bool { let url = url as NSURL let request = NSURLRequest(url: url as NSURL) return true } Where to start? I can remember a time when the government's intention to re-fund the rail fleet was often met with derision. Now it's just accepted as business as usual. The projects have an oversized build cost that most of us have given up fighting. Instead we have an "Ah, but they're government projects" defence. We rarely consider what is the best way to develop the railways, or how much more capacity we could put into the system. The Northern service out of Sydney is at its highest level ever but there is a tradeoff on the number of services it can operate each day. The government has been relatively lenient on the rolling stock maintenance. The Freight Australia Asbestos Group is part ba244e880a
